

[AC 001A]

constitution n. A set of rights, powers and procedures that regulate the relationships between public authorities in any State and between those authorities and the individual citizens.

constitutional adj. 1. of a country's constitu-

Now you know
what a constitution is,
write one.

Isn't that the government's job? No, it's yours. Because the new Constitution is a set of rules written by the people, for the people, to determine how everyone in the country will be treated, now, and in the future. These rules will be based on many issues which concern you and your rights: health, education, employment, security, and many others. And one of your rights is to help make those rules. So if you have any ideas or proposals you would like included, contact a member of the Constitutional Assembly, your organisation, or write direct to The Executive Director, The Constitutional Assembly, P.O. Box 15, Cape Town 8000. It's easy to guarantee your rights. All you need to do is speak up.

You've made your mark.

Now have your say.
