C.M.B.

---

1. U.P.F. agrees that the interim constitution should be drawn by Codesa.
2. U.P.F. agrees that it is necessary that self-governing and the T.B.V.C. states be consulted in drafting the interim constitution.
3. It is important that the general constitutional principles agreed upon Codesa should be binding on the drafters of the constitution.
4. An interim constitution should provide for an elected parliament with legislative powers as well as the power to draw the final constitution for a New South Africa.
5. The interim parliament will determine the composition and functions of an interim executive.
6. It is important that interim parliament should ensure that justiciable civil and political rights during the transition are maintained.
7. The U.P.F. has always maintained that there should be the necessary checks and balances between the executive, legislative, judiciary even during the transitional phase according to the principles underlying a constitutional state which the New South Africa should be.
8. U.P.F. agrees that new Regional boundaries for the purpose of elections should be urgently demarcated to facilitate imminent elections.
9. The U.P.F. proposes that there should be proportional representation for the National Assembly and a single-constituency based elections at regional level, in order to bring the electorate closer to their representatives at regional government level.
10. The U.P.F. believes that it is in the interest of all South Africans to participate in the election within the 1910 borders.
11. For the constitution to be approved a two-third majority is the most suitable majority.
12. U.P.F. proposes that decisions on matters of regional structures and the distribution of power between Central, regional and local levels of government should require a two-thirds majority of the regional representatives in the NA in addition to a two-third majority of all the delegates in the NA.
13. The U.P.F. agrees that Codesa should agree upon special mechanisms to ensure that the NA should complete its work of drafting and adopting the constitutions within a specified period of time.
14. It is appropriate that in the interim there should be a constitutional panel which should be the only body to determine the implementation of legislation of the interim parliament.
